PROJECT MERRIMACK - Special Report

On 5 August 1968, the Washington Mobilization for Peace announced they plan to rally in Chicago during the National Democratic Convention to be held 25-29 August 1968. All action would be of a nondisruptive nature in order not to hinder the Convention in any way and will culminate with several thousand people, mostly students, who will march 6 miles down Hallstead Street to the closest point to the Convention site, where they will remain until a nomination is made.

Forty (40) Mobilization Centers are to be set-up by geographical locations. A listing of these centers will reportedly appear in Ramparts Magazine.
